

Come And Stay A While The Accommodations of the Xanterra Travel Collection

Sometimes we feel connected to a destination because we've been there before. It lives in our hearts and comes alive in our memories.

At the Xanterra Travel Collection, we've been operating in some of the most legendary, beautiful places in the world for more than 150 years, including being proud stewards of several national parks. So we ourselves have deep connections that reach far back over time. Which means available accommodations come in all kinds of beautiful shapes and sizes. Historic national park lodges. A quaint inn that has been run by a local family for generations. An extraordinary all-suite yacht sailing to hidden harbors and small ports. Wherever you long to go in the world, wherever you need to hang your hat, Xanterra has a place waiting for you.

Let's go, adventure awaits.

policy: Feel free, feel welcome. Be happy."*

Staying In And Around Our National Parks

Uncommon access to a world of unforgettable and some of America’s most beautiful and beloved landscapes. And while these extraordinary places are ones of vast beauty, breathtaking landscapes, and scenic and geologic wonders, there is so much more to discover when you visit: our historic lodges. Journeys back in time. It may seem counterintuitive to go to the great wilderness to visit its buildings, but many stand on their own as keepers of times past. From classic log structures and adobe buildings, to elegant 1920s-style hotels and European-inspired chalets, the historic lodges of our national parks have many stories to tell. Some are so grand and luxurious, it’s hard to see their wild edges. Others shine because they are simple and rustic. Either way, these one-of-a-kind storied lodgings turn an overnight stay into an experience unlike anything else.

Glacier National Park was established in 1910 as part of the Waterton-Glacier International Peace Park, a symbol of shared stewardship and the deep-rooted relationship between Canada and the U.S. The landscape and wildlife may be the star attractions here, but the historic lodges are just as important to the rich heritage of Glacier National Park.

Zion National Park Lodge

In the heart of incredible Zion Canyon with unparalleled views of the towering sandstone cliffs. A hiker's paradise, the ultimate escape. Zion Lodge is modest in comparison to its majestic surroundings but your stay is anything but. Originally designed by Gilbert Stanley Underwood (a frequent architect of national park lodges) in the 1920s, Zion Lodge was completed in 1925 and is listed on the National Register of Historic Places. Built with whole logs and less stonework than you typically see in national park buildings, it is the only accommodation inside the park.

Sitting in harmony with the landscape and scale of the surroundings, most rooms and suites of the warm and inviting main lodge have a private porch or balcony and the 40 historic cabins feature fireplaces and private porches. The perfect place to add your story to the many complex and beautiful layers of Zion.
